Jacob Kobler shot his wife, Lillie Kobler, twice, in the neck and in the head as she lay on the floor. Kobler then grappled with his father-in-law, who he also shot, though not fatally. In addition, he shot his mother-in-law when she tried to interfere.

After Kobler married his wife, she became ill and so they lived at her parents house. Jacob Kobler also lived with them and got a new job nearer to their home. 3 weeks before the shooting he lost his job and began to resent any attention his wife gave to her parents. He wanted her to leave Phil. and move with him to NJ, but she claimed she wasn't well enough. He packed his things and was going to leave when he asked his wife one more time. She said no, and that's when → he shot her and her family. He failed at a suicide attempt and was later captured by the police.

Mary Robinson, a nurse employed by Mrs. Dubree of 13th and Pine Sts, was out walking with Mrs. Dubree's baby in her arms at the time of the shooting. Lewis' defense was insanity, but a specialist found no evidence of mental imbalance. He added, however, that the number of cases of insanity in the man's family, his father, sister, and 2 brothers being in asylums, indicated a tendency for mania that ought to receive consideration.

After shooting Ms. Robinson, Lewis attempted suicide but failed, and was captured after running through Rittenhouse Square.

Lewis had beaten Robinson on several occasions
