Mrs Gothie had objected to their marriage because Sutton

Then it was ~~for~~ during this time that he shot her. [↓]

From PL: Sutton claimed that she showed Gertrude a toy gun he would be accused of trying to kill her, shot her in breast then himself.

" The shooting followed a quarrel in a pool room near Seventeenth and South Sts. Bennett borrowed a revolver from a negro named Black and waited for Bridell, whom he shot twice. Ella Jarden accused her servant, William H. Lane, of theft. Although the report is somewhat clouded, Lane apparently shot Mrs. Jarden and then shot her two daughters, Madelaine and Eloise. The newspapers report it, and it seems to be, a horrendous crime.

(Note the speed of the trial and execution, which occurred just a few days and months, respectively, after the crime itself. Also, after reading the newspaper report I have some question as to Lane's sanity. He claims to remember having only shot Ella Jarden and claims to recall nothing of what happened afterwards.

In the public ledger - the name of the victims is Furbush not Jordan. Jordan appears to have been her maiden name - she was a widow
- corrected next day to Jordan
