Remarks:

Michael McCormack, ~~and~~ his brother and two other fellows ordered stew in the Mavros' restaurant. When they finished the stew they made some remarks about how bad it was and made some Greek slurs. Then they refused to pay. The defendant, Nicholas Mavros got his father, and one of the guys took a swing at him, then went to strike him with a bottle. Nicholas Mavros, meanwhile, ran and got a knife and cut Mike McCormack as he was going to strike his father. Nicholas Mavros was found G of inv mo, retried and found NG.

John Webb and Joseph Hendrick both (Oct 22, 1933 paroled) worked as truck drivers for Derbyshire Bros. They had argued frequently and had an argument on the day of the stabbing. Webb had complained about Hendrick and Hendrick came to his boarding house to fight him. Webb came to the door with a knife, and during the fight stabbed
Hendrick in the heart, of which wound he later died.
Webb was found guilty of 2nd degree murder and sentenced to 1-20 yrs. He was paroled about a year later.

Inquirer: Hendricks quit his job that day and went to Webb's ~~boarding~~ house residence, where he challenged him to a fistfight. At some stage, Webb pulled a knife and stabbed him.

Webb + Hendricks had apparently worked together for a year w/o speaking to each other.

Moses Hester, the defendant was married and had young children and he also had a playmate, the deceased, Addie McClimon. On the night the stabbing occurred, the two were at a party together, and it was time for him to go home (he always went home, every night - much to her displeasure) and he told her so. She told him he wasn't going home that night. Now the commonwealth claims that he pulled out a knife and cut her maliciously. He claims that she pulled out a knife and tried to cut him.

He claimed that he cut her once at the top of the stairs and once at the bottom to get away. Anyway the injuries she sustained killed her.

Remarks:

The defendant, the victim and 3 other men were playing cards at their friends house. For some unknown reason, Scott called Butler an nit - and went into the kitchen. Butler followed him and Scott reached for his back pocket. Butler thought he was pulling a gun - he shot him twice. There were about 30 character witnesses for him stating his fantastic reputation.

Daniel Piccarelli, alias Dan the Hook, had been threatened by the deceased, Orlando Di Tullio, and was out looking for him. Piccarelli ran into him on the street and said something like, "I heard you were looking to smash my nose up and down 11th St." They squared off as if for a fight, then Piccarelli pulled a gun and shot the unarmed Di Tullio. Piccarelli was found guilty of 1st degree murder and sentenced to death, retried and sentenced to life.

INA - Apparently, no one would talk at scene of the crime as to who shot Di Tullio. Paper suspects it is sang warfare.

One of the defendants, Alice Marshall, was friendly with the wife of the deceased, Walter Sheppard. ^{Alice} she went to visit her, but since she was gone, stayed and drank with Sheppard. She went back to her house with Sheppard and got into a fight with her ~~common-law~~ ^{husband} John Marshall. Alice Marshall and Walter Sheppard returned to ~~his~~ house and drank some more. Then John Marshall and Richard Burns showed up and the former got into a fight with Sheppard. He claims to have been mad with anger at the time, and to avoid arrest ^{for} assault and battery, tied up the semi-conscious Sheppard and ~~put~~ ^{deposited} him in the cellar, where he later died of suffocation (from the gag in his mouth). John Marshall then fled to New York with the other defendants, using the money he had stolen from the deceased Sheppard. John Marshall was found guilty of 2nd deg murder and sentenced for 10-20 years.

Alice Marshall was found NG, and Richard Burns remained a fugitive from justice.

Joseph Franco, the accused, was fired from his job by the foreman of the shop, Joseph Adamski, the deceased. Franco was very upset as he had a wife and seven children to support. He asked for his job back but was refused. (He was originally fired for making a smart-ass comment to Adamski.) ~~He~~ About 6 weeks later he assaulted Adamski, striking him with a pipe, fracturing his skull, and causing his death. He was found guilty of 2nd deg murder and sentenced for 5-10 yrs.

This is an interesting case because of the ~~accused~~ accused situation and the judge's comment. Franco had a good reputation and was a hard worker. He had a large family to support and was very upset over losing his job. The judge believed that Franco was not trying to kill Adamski, only assault him. He was struck by the man's previous good record, his responsibility to his family, and his plea of guilty. All these reasons combined to give Franco a more lenient sentence.

Remarks:

There are two very different stories about what happened on the night of the murder. The defendant claims he was not there. Witnesses testify that he clubbed the victim to death in a restaurant at 510 S. 12th St. There had been an argument resulting in a fight between the two men and some others on the 19th of Feb in the same place. He also injured another man with the same weapon. (Mar 3, 1938 - paroled)

The two men did not really know each other very well. They were at a party - everyone was drinking - the accused drank 3 half pints of whiskey. He was carrying a gun for the purpose of trying to pawn it. He even tried to pawn it at the party. There was a general fight; the victim punched him in the mouth and then he got shot. The defendant claims not to remember who fired the gun. Witnesses say he fired it right at the victim at pt. blank range.

Then Ellis took Alberta out into the back yard. He allegedly struck her with a stick he was carrying and held a gun to her head. The others around forced him to leave and Alberta Fisher went back into the house spitting blood. She apparently had a tubercular condition which was aggravated by the four broken ribs she received from her husband. She was in the hospital from Nov 3, 1931 to Jan 17, 1932. She then went home and died on May 1, 1932. Her husband, Ellis Fisher was found guilty of involuntary manslaughter and sentenced to nine months.

The day the shooting occurred, the defendant was throwing a B-day party for his 10 yr old son. The deceased started throwing things around in the kitchen and breaking dishes. The defendant asked him to leave and the deceased pulled a ~~gun~~ knife out of a drawer. The defendant ran up stairs, and waited 5-10 minutes until he didn't hear any more noise. He came downstairs, but brought his pistol with him. He came downstairs and the deceased raised the knife over his head, the defendant shot at him, and killed him.

Remarks:

The ^{deceased} ~~defendant~~ and his wife owned the room which the defendant was renting. On the day the stabbing took place, the deceased had been trying all day to get rent money out of the defendant. The defendant didn't want to give him money while he was drunk. Someone told him while he was at work that he had better go home and protect his sister because her husband was beating her. He got there and she was crying. The deceased came home shortly and demanded the rent. The defendant finally gave it to him and then was ordered out of the house by the deceased, who then came after him with a hatchet. His wife tried to come between them and he pulled out a razor, and started slashing at him with it. In self defense, he grabbed a butcher knife and began stabbing the deceased.

Remarks:

The defendant and the deceased were common law husband and wife, but he had a huge record of having other wives and many mistresses. On the night the shooting occurred, he had recieved a phone call from another woman he was obviously intimate with. The defendant locked her out of the apartment. She let him back in and he knocked her into a window, which broke and cut her knees up. He grew angry with her and said he was going to go tell all the roomers in the house that they didn't have to pay rent anymore. She told him she would shoot him if he did but he went ahead. She pulled a revolver out of her desk drawer and shot him. She then called the police and turned herself in.

The defendant, Henderson went to Germantown with his gun loaded specifically to find the deceased, Hampton and to get back at least a portion of the 300 dollars he had owed him for two years. He held him at gun point and Hampton gave him all the money he had on him. Hampton then located an undercover police car and told them he had been held up, and that he could identify the man who had done it. He climbed on the running board and they went in search of Henderson. They caught up with him in a few minutes and chased him. He turned around and shot several times - one of the shots killing the deceased. The undercover officers chased him until they had him cornered where he surrendered.

Ruth Saunders was apparently a woman of low character - had many boyfriends. She and her husband (the defendant) and another man were sitting around drinking. She had just come home after being away for a week or so and started screaming that she wished she had stayed away. They got into a tussle, the other man took off, and when he woke up in the morning, she was dead. Her throat was slit from ear to ear with a heavy duty knife.
